Russian Jewish Persecution.

A large number of Jews from southern Russia are coming to this country to escape the persecutions to which they are subjected there. Two or three instalments of the 150,000 expected have already arrived. It is supposed by Americans generally that this persecution is unprovoked and that the innocent Israelites are the victims of Christian ignorance and prejudice on account of their religious faith. It would seem, however, from a communication by Professor William Wells, of Union College, that this is not the case and that the Jews themselves are largely to blame for their present condition and circumstances. Dr. Wells does not approve of the persecution, but he declares that there is "another side" to the case, and in the Methodist he presents that other side and gives a few reasons for the harsh treatment of the Jews by the Russian peasants. First, he says, many of the Jews of southern Russia and eastern Prussia are nihilists and may thank themselves for many of the sufferings they have endured. Second, because of the extremely repulsive character of the Russian Jews in all relations of society to some sections of the country, especially in Poland, where they are exclusively the distillers and rum-sellers. A more repulsive race, Dr. Wells writes, can rarely be found than a village people mostly by Jews. Everything is the picture of filth and misery. The Polish Jew is the most disgusting creature of dumb brutes that can be found. These Jews stand on the lowest level of humanity. The coming Jew finds a pleasure in cheating even his God. For example, the law forbids him on the Sabbath day to go more than a certain number of paces from the earth under the threshold of his house. When the Jew desires to evade this law he carries with him a handful of earth and sows it where the required number of paces is exhausted and so on till the end of the journey. Toward any other than a Jew the Polish Jew has no sort of moral obligations and also no sympathy. And were to the Christian that falls into his hands! He is lost—the Jew will fly him alive. The Polish Jew has an unquenchable aversion to any sort of bodily labor and quite as unquenched a predilection to all sorts of trade and dickerings. The Russian government and cultivated Jews have tried to put the agricultural colonies for him, but in vain. They sell the animals, plough, and even the very walls of the houses, and return to their bartering. Among smugglers, burglars, horse thieves and all that class the Jews form a numerous body. In view of these facts Dr. Wells says one can easily imagine the feelings of the non-Jewish population toward this unprovoked crew. The Polish Jew is originating and serving towards his superiors, but is a perfect tyrant towards those who are in his power. He continues to some men always to evade military duty, although ready enough to call on the military for protection in time of need; and thus when persecutions begin there is no voice raised in his favor. Third, in South Russia the masses are convinced that Alexander II. was violently murdered by the Jews, and accordingly they do all in their power on such occasions to put the Jews back for it. It is also asserted that some of this destruction is the work of Jews themselves for their own conniving purposes. As an illustration Dr. Wells writes that when the news of the riot at Kiel reached a neighboring village a Jewish rum-seller applied to several peasants near him for the privilege of secreting his goods in their houses, to which they kindly agreed, as they were on friendly terms with him. The next morning they were not a little surprised to see this same Jew come with a magistrate to search their premises on the accusation that in the night they had robbed him during the excesses. The fact that this property was with them was so conclusive that the peasants were arrested and were on the point of being convicted when they were able by a happy circumstance to prove their innocence and his guilt. The same journal friendly to the Jews, gave currency to this story and vouched for it. Peasants will test down their own consciences if a Jew is found in them.—New York Herald
